Positive Discipline and Making Sense of Secondary School Data

Tiger Education and Training is seeking to work with universities to help develop trainee teachers working towards QTS standards. Trainee teachers are often daunted by their first practical placement; despite being subject specialists they are not always well versed in other aspects of teaching and learning.

QTS Standards state that trainee teachers have:

- "a clear framework for discipline and (must be able to) create environments for learning that stimulate interest, value learning and support collaboration and independence"
- "knowledge of data sets and use national and local pupil performance data to compare progress and attainment of learner"

Tiger Education and Training provide skilled and experienced practitioners to help trainee teachers meet these standards. Our training sessions cover two key themes:

- Effective classroom management
- Effective application of prior attainment data

To reflect these themes, we offer the following training sessions for students on Teacher Training programmes:

1. Behaviour management training for trainee teachers
2. School data training to enable trainee teachers to understand and apply school data

Training Session 1: Positive Discipline

"Co-operative and consistent behaviour strategies for effective teaching and learning"

Effective behaviour management training equips practitioners with the skills they need to work with secondary education learners. We know that trainee teachers are very knowledgeable in their chosen subject; we can help improve the quality of delivery to secondary school learners with workshop-based training on Positive Discipline.

The idea at the heart of Positive Discipline is simple: preparation and prevention in behaviour management rather than fire-fighting. It presents tried-and-tested classroom management strategies which create a disciplined, cooperative and consistent learning environment for both teacher and student.

Five key themes underpin Positive Discipline:

- prevention
- caring
- organisation
- cooperation
- community

Training in Positive Discipline translates these themes into practical strategies which will help to maximise achievement. Training sessions end with an interactive planning exercise, which generates a clear strategy for improving behaviour management - at both a classroom and school wide level.

Training Session 2: Making Sense of Secondary School Data

“Applying school data to improve success rates and progression to post-16 study”

School data presents a minefield of acronyms, statistics, percentages and scores that can leave some trainee teachers feeling confused and demotivated.

Making Sense of Secondary School Data helps trainee teachers to:

- understand and interpret commonly used prior attainment data and data sets
- apply prior attainment data to set expectations for performance

The training session helps to identify relevant prior attainment data and use it to set potential outcome grades for individual learners. Themes such as effective progress monitoring, reporting and intervention are presented, and tried-and-tested strategies discussed.

The training session may also include demonstrations of Tiger Education and Training learner performance tools that are being used by secondary schools. These Microsoft Excel-based tools provide an instant balance sheet of school performance against league tables.

The training session ends with an interactive planning session to create a strategy for better utilisation of school data at an individual and departmental level.

Training in Positive Discipline and Making Sense of Secondary School Data will help lead to:

- Enhanced teacher confidence
- Stronger communication channels between student and teacher
- Efficient and effective use of school data
- Improved results
